EST MODUS IN REDUS. WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1881.

The Late President's Maxima. In illustration of the late President's intellectual character, the following extracts have been taken from a work recently published at Philadelphia by Mr. William R. Balch, containing a collection of General Garfield's maxims, rules of conduct, and judgments on society: "I would rather be beaten in the content of the conduct of t on society: "I would rather be beaten in right than succeed in wrong. I feel a profeunder reverence for a boy than for a man. I never met a ragged boy in the atreet without feeling that I may owe him a salute, for I know not what possibilities may be buttoned up under his coat. Poverty is uncomfortable, as I can testify; but nine times out of ten the last thing that can happen to a young man is best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself. In all my acquaintance I never new a man to be drowned who was worth the saving. If the power to do hard work is not talent, it is the best possible substitute for it. We cannot study nature profoundly without bringing ourselves into commun with the spirit of art, which pervades and fills the universe. If there be one thing upon this earth that maskind love and admire better than another it is a brave man; it is a man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil. It is one of the precious mysteries of sorrow that it finds olace in unselfish thought. Every character is the joint product of nature and nurture. It has been fortunate that most of our greatest men have left no descendants to shine in the borrowed lustre of a great name. At un-certain currency, that goes up and down, hits the laborer, and hits him hard. It helps him last and hurts him first. We no longer at-tribute the untimely death of infants to the sins of Adam, but to bad nursing and ignorance. The granite hills are not so changeless and abiding as the restless sea. In their struggle with the forces of nature, the ability to la-bor was the richest patrimony of the colonists. Coercion is the basis of every law in the universe, human or Divine. A law is no law without operation behind it. For the noblest man who lives there still remains a conflict. We hold reunions, not for the dead, for there is nothing in all the earth that you and I can do for the dead. They are past our help and past our praise. We can add to them no glory, we can give to them no immortality. They do not need us, but for ever and for evermore we need them. Throughout the whole web of mational existence we trace the golden thread of furnan progress toward a higher and better estate. Heroes did not make our liberties, but they reflected and illustrated them. The life and light of a nation are inseparable. After all, territory is but the body of a nation. The people who inhabit its hills and valleys are its soul, its spirit, its life. In them dwells its hope of immorality. Among them, if any hope of immorality. Among them, if any-where, are to be found its chief elements of destruction. It matters little what may be the forms of national institutions of the life, free-dom, and growth of society are secured. Finally, our great hope for the future, our great safeguard against danger, is to be found in the general and thorough education of our people, and in the virtue which accompanies anch education. The germ of our political in-stitutions, the primary cell from which they were evolved, was in the New England town, and the vital force, the forming soul of the town was the town meeting, which, for all local concerns, was King, Lords and Commons in all. It is as much the duty of all good men to protect and defend the reputation of worthy public servants as to detect public ruscals. Be fit for more than the thing you are now doing. If you are not too large for the place you are too small for it. Young men talk of trusting to the spur of the occasion. That trust is vain. Occasions cannot make spurs. If you expect to wear spurs you must win them, If you wish to use them you must buckle them to your own heels before you go into the fight. Greek is perhaps the most perfect instrument of thought ever invented by man, and its literature has never been equalled in purity of style and boldness of expression. Great ideas travel slowly and for a time noiselessly, as the gods whose feet were shod with wool. What the arts are to the world of matter, literature to the world of mind. History is but the un-rolted scroll of prophesy. The world's his-tory is a divine poem, of which the history of every nation is a canto and every man a word.

C. O. BERGER,

Memphitus Americanus.

where soffrage is illuminated by education

Its strains have been pealing along down the centuries, and though there have been mingled the discords of warring cannon and dying

A few nights ago a well organized effort was nade to jump the Centennial mine, which came very near being a success. The parties who undertook to jump the mine were two Rocky Mountain polecats with a bad record. Almost as soon as they entered the tunnel from the east the men in the mine began to be suspicious that somebody with a bad breath was n the lower level. The anapici in grew until it assumed about the size of a bale of hay. It was resolved to drive out the invadera, Major fering equil security. Downey went down and threw a chunk of free milling quartz at the enemy. Then the Major went back to the rest of the party to hold a SEE LIST OF POLICY RHDOLES! consultation. The rest of the party didn't seem so tickled to see him as he thought the y ought to be. They shumed him, and evaded him, and told him that his presence wasn't agrees ble under the circumstances. Although the mine is a very valuable one, it was almost J C Glade. decided at one time to abandon it to the jumpers. At last, however, everybody made a grand rush into the tunnel and demolished the enemy with long-handled shovels. Major Downey handed the above information into the A McWayne, office with a long pole. He also told a friend that he would go out of hown this forences to a quiet spot beyond the graveyard and change F his clothes. The Rocky Mountain polecut before he is domesticated, is not prized as a songster very much; but he has a way of making his presence felt wherever he goes, and even in death you cannot forget him. There was one of these ducile creatures got into our cellar once, a good many years ago, and the ventilation of the cellar being very poor the air was soon vitiated to such an extent that the clock stopped. We don't care for death in any form in which it may come. These who know us will agree that we never weaken. We have faced the deadly watermelon when strong men were falling thick and fast, and we have stood at the muzzle of a daily newspaper and moved down spring poets like broad swaths of timethy hay, and yet never weakened or squealed; but the drappled quadruped with the all-pervading presence appeals to our valor in vain. Our victory over him has always been vicarious, The National Debt of the United States

The actual existing National debt is perhaps $10,000 less than the figures of the Treasury Department, as sent out on the first of each month. The fractional paper currency, for example, is estimated at $7,097,559, in addition to $8,000,000 which, according to Secretary Sherman, had been lost or destroyed prior to June 30, 1880. Since that date, and up to October 1, 1881, only $116,395 of that currency has been presented for redemption. At this rate the last of the fractional carrency will not be redeemed for about seventy-seve years. In point of fact, it will never be redeemed, for it is not probable that as much as $2,000,000 are now outstanding. "The debt on which interest has caused since maturity" amounted to $19.039,595 on the first of October. Of this sum $57,665 matured in 1837, forty-four years ago, and yet the certificates have never been presented for redemp-tion. Other bonds and certificates maturing as portion from one to ten years. The unclaimed money orders aggregate no less than $2,000,000 at the New York City postoffice alone, the principal part of which has been lying in the sub-treasury for years. In the entire country the aggregate of unclaimed postoffice orders—that that is, unclaimed for a year or more-mus amount to upward of $5,000,000. Cougress will be called upon at the next session to make some provision for the transfer of these sur-plus and idle funds; for the money must lie in the treasury to meet these obligations unless otherwise or ered by Congress.
